CUMULATIVE ZEAL OF MEAT CAMPAIGNERS LEADS TO ARRESTS

Contention Today Revolves Around Chicken Trade, Which Women Make Difficult for Dealers.

Six arrests were made today in the West End and the police had to draw their clubs to quell the disturbin connection with the campaign of the Hebrew women to reduce the price of meat. Increased picketing on the part of the campaigners, the crowded conditions of market day, which is held every Thursday in Jewish communities, and the vigorous efforts now being adopted by the women kept the police, force busy making a clear passageway for traffic in the affected area. In making two of the arrests the policemen had difficulty in preventing their intended prisoners from being rescued by sympathizers.

Jacob Rosenstein was taken in charge for alleged assault on a man from Peabody, Mass., who unaware that a strike was in progress entered the shop of J. Rosenberg at 132 Spring street, and purchased a chicken. Mrs. Goodman, whose son Nathan is secretary for the striking committee, was arrested on a charge of inciting to riot. Mollie Shubert, who lives at 143 Leverett street, was arrested on a charge of making a disturbance and breaking the window of the store occupied by J. Rosenberg. Harry Weinterand of 28 Poplar street and Harris Diamond were arrested on charges of rested for alleged disturbance.

Former employees of the Elevated who were discharged before the strike testified at the investigation before the state board of arbitration today that they knew of no other reason for their dismissal by the management than that they joined the union. They testified that they had received the an mual gold bonus for good service for several years up to the recent disbursements.

It was alleged by the union at the hearing today that a "loyal" employee of the Boston Elevated railway got into a meeting of the union carmen and brought about action that resulted in strike being called, and that he did o under orders of the company.

Amid the conflicting impressions of the man, the one that stands out most persistently is his modest, unassuming demeanor. There is a quietness in his speech and in his movements that speaks of a latent force, and a closer acquaintance with Sun shows that though under medium height he is a man whose physical and mental energies give him a commanding position over his fellows. The interviewer commenced by asking if he had any explanation to offer why the powers had delayed their recognition of the new republic.

Powers' Reasons Given

Yes, came the ready answer. I think it is fairly obvious. The powers are afraid that one individual power will recognize the republic before the others. and that it will thereby reap the advantage. They want to recognize the republic together and at one time. I think the powers have not yet come to any agreement. POUGHKEEPSIE, N. No further trips over the course under the watch are expected, and the practise will be almost entirely confined to racing starts and long, easy paddles. Among the visitors to the scene of the regatta Wednesday were Coach Wray of Harvard and Captain-elect Abeles of the Crimson eight. These two followed the work of the crews throughout both the morning and evening rowing in the Harvard coaching launch and took a long look at Columbia. # News of Importance From the Latin-American Centers

States the report from Guayaquil published on this page is unusually interesting. It calls attention to a point of controversy between the American railroad from Guayaquil to Quito and the government of Ecuador that is not generally known. That dispute over the rate on government salt shipments is a radically different thing from the claims of arrears of subsidy and amounts due for transportation of troops and material. According to the version given in the note of protest sent by the management to the minister of public works, the governments past and present have been using the provisions of the railroad agreement for speculative purposes, in connection with the salt monopoly. The railroad, therefore, claims a tidy sum for freight accumulated through abusive application of half rates on salt shipments when full rates should have been paid, as in the case of a commercial commodity pure and simple. The question arises, what attitude will the United States government in its support of the railroad claims for back subsidy and military transportation take toward the controversy involving the interpretation of the contract between the railroad and the government of Ecuador?

Diplomatic support of claims that are plainly collectible is different from supporting claims which happen to include items that are in dispute because of controversial interpretations of confracts and clauses. Whatever measures are contemplated by Washington in aid of the railroad company, it would appear from this new aspect of the question that the latter cannot very well be sifted without sifting some of the transactions of the government of Ecuador. Such a thing would naturally be looked upon by the principal Latin republies, Brazil, Chile and the Argentine, in a vastly different light from a similar action taken anywhere north of Panama.

However, there is much to be hoped from the proposed visit to Guavaguil of an American commission in the interest of the Panama canal, inasmuch as this will afford an opportunity for a candid exchange of views between Americans and Ecuadorians and be a basis for future cooperation. It is important to bear in mind that the people of Ecuador exercise in the councils of Latin America a measure of influence altogether out of proportion to the small size of their country, and that, thanks to the stanch friendship of Chile, they are closely connected with Latin-American nations whose good will is becoming ever more valuable to the United States.

They began the sub-committee and at 7 o'clock tonight have it adopted by the whole committee. It will be presented tomorrow to the convention.

Mr. Bryan completely routed the Murphy-Sullivan-Taggart combination by strategic moves in the sub-committee. When the 11 members met at 10 o'clock this morning they discussed the rough draft plans. Then Senator Culberson of Texas proposed that Bryan and O'Gorman be entrusted with the composition work for the sub-committee. It went through at once. One way, said to be favored generally by those who expect to be candidates for the Legislature, is that progressives enter the Republican caucus and compete against the Republican candidates for the nomination. Then, if the progressive successful in the primaries, he would run at the election as the Republican candidate with the designation "progressive" attached.

This procedure would be resorted to only in those districts where it was felt that the progressive had a good prospect of carrying the primaries.

TIDY ONE-PIECE MORNING GOWN

Dimity with trimming of embroidered banding

THE one-piece morning gown that can be slipped on easily, yet is dainty and attractive in effect, is what every busy woman wants. This one is so sim ple that it can be quickly and readily made and at the same time it is smart. It includes the side closing that is a feature of the season and the neck can be made square or slightly higher and finished with a collar, while the sleeves allow desirable variety. In the illustration they are made in three-quarter length gathered into bands, but they can be cut shorter and finished with rolled over cuffs if preferred.

The skirt is a six-gored one and the back gore can be either gathered or arranged to form a box-plait.

This gown is made of dimity with trimming of embroidered banding. Lawns, batistes and all simple materials of the kind are appropriate, with trimming either of embroidery or lace, or of contrasting material.

Scalloped edges are being much used and the blouse, made as indicated in the small front view, with collar, cuffs and front edges scalloped and either buttonholed or bound would be very pretty. A great many shades of red on white are being much used. A pretty effect could be obtained by using white lawn, dotted or striped with rose and scalloped with the same color.

For the medium size, the gown will require 7 vards of material 27, 51/4 yards 36 or 41/4 yards 44 inches wide with 31/2 yards of banding. The skirt at the lower edge measures two yards. The pattern 7448, cut in sizes from 34 to 44 inches bust measure, can be bought at any May Manton agency or will be sent by mail. Address 102 West Thirtysecond street, New York, or Masonic Temple, Chicago.

RASPBERRY JAM

Take a pound of sugar-or, better still, a pound and a quarter-to each pound of fruit. Macerate the raspberries for three or four hours in powdered sugar. Then put them into a preserving pan with half the sugar, and cook them on a quick fire. When the raspberries have melted, pour the whole on a rather fine sieve, so that the extremely small seeds cannot pass through. Rub them through the sieve with a wooden spoon. Put the pulp back into the preserving pan with the other half of the sugar. Boil up quickly until the jam has attained a suitable consistence. Facts About Career of Man Who Was Principal Author of the World Drama in Which France Figured Many Years After His Activities Closed

DOCTRINE STIRRED TWO CONTINENTS

At this time, the eve of the second centenary of an author whose works influenced world events, while his eccentricities often caused amazement, the life and works of the man are of particular interest. The doctrines he preached, his social life and the part he played in molding human events are herein ably reviewed with a view to their present significance.

It was this which when he attempted to become constructive, drove him back to the ancients for his models, and which drew from him the declaration that the arch enemy of humanity was the man to whom it first occurred to set up a ring fence, and proclaim, "This is mine." Not that there was in his philosophy any foretaste of socialism. The rich were to be left contemptuously to their fleshpots but the poverty of the poor was to be seasoned with pride. To him equality always meant, not equality of possession, but of opportunity. His position, his phraseology were reproduced with admirable clarity by his disciple Robespierre, during the revolution: "I do not want to touch your treasures, however impure their source. # CITIZEN IN ROLE

Giuseppe Buchignani, a Dorchester gardener, says the next time he goes down to the ocean to meet his brotherin-law who comes on the big ship from Italy, he won't go. Yesterday he dropped his rake and went to the White Star line pier to greet his relative who came on the Cretic. He got aboard unobserved before the passengers were off. He met his brother-in-law, but when he tried to leave the boat he got mixed up with the steerage and was being swept ashore with the crowd, when he was discovered. He had no ticket, such as the immigrants have, neither could he convince the officers. So he had to wait six hours until the name of every immigrant was checked up.

A HEAVIER TONE PREVAILS IN THE NEW YORK MARKE

Trading Is Still Largely for Professional Account -Local Copper Stocks Are Somewhat Erratic

LONDON IRREGULAR

Stocks displayed a rather heavy tone at the opening this morning of the New York market. There was no news to account for the lower prices following a strong close last night. Some traders are prone to attribute price changes to political developments and ascribed the strong tone late yesterday afternoon to the defeat of W. J. Bryan for the temporary chairmanship of the Democratic national convention, which, it is asserted eliminated him as a possible candidate for the Presidential nomination. The best that can be said of the trading is that it is a professional market. A few specialties were prominent this

NEWYORKSTOCKS BOSTON & MAINE

Boston & Maine in the current fiscs year will earn between 21/2 and 3 pe cent on its common stock, compare with less than ½ of 1 per cent in the previous fiscal period. Indications are for an excellent showing for the mont of June, and final figures for the 1 months will total somewhat better tha 2.6 per cent earned toward the 4 pe cent rate now being paid. The improvement in Boston & Maine results in the past 12 months has been substantial and genuine. In the 191 year earning power was sacrificed to maintenance of the property, which pol icy with higher wage levels wiped out almost completely shareholders' profits In the first 10 months of the current year more than half a million dollars has been expended on upkeep in addition to the amount spent in the same period of last year and yet the road will b able to show for the full fiscal period within some $500,000 of existing divi dend requirements covered. Interest charges will be somewhat larg er than those of last year on account of the Worcester, Nashua & Rochester, finally financed out of the $12,000,000 note East Boston ...... 151/2 151/2 151/2 151/2 ssue of last month, but a corresponding decrease in rentals will just about offset American. however, during the past winter will be reflected in a larger charge for hire of equipment, which was $848,580 last year. Based on latest published figures with remaining items estimated, Boston & Maine's income account for the 1912 year compares as follows with 1911 actual re-

CENTRAL LEATHER HALF YEAR SHOWS

Estimated That Balance for Dividends Above Fixed Charges Will Be Well

GOOD REBOUND

A BIG IMPROVEMENT

Net earnings of Central Leather Company, which last year got uncomfortably near the vanishing point, are coming back with vigor. For the first half of the fiscal year, the six months to June 30, it is expected that the balance for dividends above fixed charges will exceed $2,200,000, an amount equal within $150,000 of the full year's 7 per cent dividend on the $33,299,000 preferred stock. The real measure of this betterment is indicated by the fact that during the 1911 year the six months to June 30 produced an actual loss from operations without taking out any interest on the $39,626,000 bonded debt

The company's ability to make a fair profit this year has been due primarily .146 % 146 146 146 146 to the cleaned-up condition of the leather market. The years 1908 and 1909 saw a very heavy over-production of sole leather throughout the United States. The result of accumulation and a weak market in face of constantly stiffening hide prices was that by the last of 1910 there had accumulated in the eastern market, particularly in Boston, a tremendous bulk of unsold sole leather. Probably 7,000,000 sides of leather above normal were being carried by the different sole leather tanners. This condition necessi tated the famous shut-down of 1911. This radical readjustment crowded the losses of Central Leather into its 1911

Now with stocks of unsold leather sold and shipped away and no surplus in sight or likely to be created conditions have become such that the tanners have been able to advance leather in keeping with the persistent upward climb in Union sole for example is six to seven cents above Jan. 1 quotations and by the end of 1912 it is predicted that this grade of sole leather will be above 40 cents per pound, or 33 per cent higher than it was the first of the year. The advance has been legitimate and is based on the abnormal hide prices, the highest in the history of the industry. The only difference between 1910 and 1912 is that in the earlier year the big over-production obliged the tanners to carry unaided the advance in hides. Now the tanners have shifted the load to the consumer just as would be done in any other line

If Central Leather can do as well- in the last six months as in the first half it stands a fair prospect to restore to surplus the $2,035,748 which was drawn from that account to make possible the continuance of 7 per cent dividends during the dark days of 1911.

serves of $18,444,044. This included the year's surplus of $139,232. President Frederick H. Eaton says: The railroads were not in the market for new equipment in any considerable quantity at the beginning of the company's fiscal year. There was later, lowever, a resumption in a marked degree of buying activity on the part of the railroads, with a result that orders were booked in fairly large volume. The closing period of our fiscal year showed some slight cessation of this activity. Inquiries, however, persist, and buying in moderate volume continues. Your company closed the fiscal year with contracts on its books for a considerably greater number of cars than it had at the close of the fiscal year 1910-1911. "The fiscal year 1911-1912 opened under sufficiently depressing conditions. Your company then had on hand a comparatively small number of orders-a condition not peculiar to the car building industry, nor to your company among car-building concerns. The railroads remained out of the market for new equipment for a considerable part of the year. When buying activity was resumed, it was on a keenly competitive basis, with a resultant exceedingly narrow profit margin." A sum of $478,386 was spent for construction and additions to steel car lants during the year. The Chicago plant has been equipped to turn out cars in the construction of which steel enters to a large extent. President Eaton again calls attention to the increasing demand for steel cars and says that the company has kept pace with this demand. He continues: "It will be noted from the general balance sheet annexed that the item of materials is $12,439,214, as compared with $9,103,578 at the close of the fiscal year 1910--11; while the item of cash on hand, in banks and represented by certificates of deposits is $5,285,. 371, as compared with $7,485,429 for the corresponding time of the preceding year. This is the converse of the situation noted and referred to in the president's letter of June 29, 1911, and results from the renewal of buying activities afready

> That the bonds should have regained ground to such an extent-especially in light of their strength of the past week -has been viewed with keen interest in financial circles. A number of reports have circulated regarding a contemplated plan for enlarged improvement expenditures, but on the face of things, the nagnificent pasturage everywhere, will proposed expenditure of a few millions the market level of the bonds so rapidly upward. What really was a factor in strengthening the bonds was the statement, originating in apparently responsible quarters, that there was to be an assessment levied on Wabash stock to effect the cost of reorganizing the property, and that the refunding 4s were not to be scaled down to as large an extent as formerly had been expected. It is early to talk of reorganization yet, but it was the talk of assessment which last week carried the Wabash shares off and remedy these faults that is the task of ent the bonds upward. That there is still considerable head way to be effected before the Wabash can be set properly on its own legs, is well understood; as an offset to these reports of impending reorganization the company's earnings results can be viewed as highly significant. They have not been so satisfactory as might be looked for. In April, according to the last received published, gross earnings were $2,071,000 considerably short of a year ago, while operating expenses amounted to no less than $2,113,600, the result being a deficit for the month of $42,000 before provision had been made for payment of even a bad been made for payment of even a bad been made for payment of even a charges. Omission of the $1,680,000 yearly interest on the refunding 4s has been offset by addition of only $600,000 due on the receivers certificates which have been put out since last December and as only six months interest on these certificates will figure in the fiscal year's reckoning there has been saved in the fixed charges to this year's income account virtually $1,400,000. The difference between this amount saved and the falling off that has occurred in net earnings will be still a debit against the company of $300,000, however, and as the 1911 annual report showed a deficit of $403,000, this means (provided of course there is no further retrogression) that the fiscal year 1912 will have closed with an operating deficit of $703,000.

It maintains that practically the whole of articulate Sind, whether European of Indian, is resolutely and irreconcilably opposed to the idea, and it goes on to point out in addition that there is little likelihood that Sind will forever be content to remain in subjection to the Bombay presidency, whose seat of government is located amidst an environment sometimes envious of and hostile to Sind's most cherished economic interests. Moscow attracted population by its comparative security from invasion and by its accessibility by waterways and roads. Its princes extended their territory. All Europe came to use the names Muscovy and Muscovite as synonymous with Russia and Russian, and the Grand Duke of Muscovy was supposed to be the chief ruler of Russia. In 1380 the Prince of Moscow won the first Russian victory over the Tartars, and thus redeemed Russia from the vassalage of a century and a half. Moscow became the religious as well as the political capital. became, in fact, the religious capital first, for the seat of the metropolitan of the Greek church in Russia was established there before the primacy of the Muscovite princes was acknowledged and greatly contributed to that acknowledgment.

Late in the fifteenth century, after the Tartar suzerainty had been removed, Ivan of Moscow, third of the name, assumed the title of "Monarch" and in treatics with foreign powers, of "Czar," or Caesar, "of all Russia." And the beginning of the autocracy was also the beginning of that union of church and state which is so much more complete and intimate than in any other modern state. The boyars had been representatives of the aristocracy of the city or principality.

So gratitude on earth is a two-fold offering and service; first an offering to God and a service to ourselves. In this aspect it cleanses the thought of selfishness and materialism and opens the way for the coming of those things boyhood friend said: "I remember one heard me. The Populace and Politics

BALTIMORE and the scenes being enacted there this week are but repetitions of Chicago and the scenes enacted there last week, as Baltimore and Chicago and their conventions and incidental commotions are but simple repetitions of occurrences that have been quadrennial for generations. The wise men who founded the republic never tired of saying that so long as the people continued to take a deep interest in public affairs the take a deep interest in public affairs the nation and its institutions would be safe. What they feared was apathy on the part of the masses-an apathy that would enable the self-seeking and the unscrupulous few to obtain such control of the country's affairs as to enable them to subvert and finally overturn the principles upon which it was established. This belief did not disappear with the passing of the fathers. It has been entertained by thoughtful men of the land in all periods of American national history. It has been held by thoughtful Americans in and out of public life down to the present time. Apparently there is no foundation for the fear which too often attaches to it, and less now than ever. Public interest in politics was never so widespread and never so acute in the United States as it has been during the last few years. This is at once a cause and an effect of the universal political unrest, but more a cause than an effect. The public intellect has become sharpened to a keener appreciation of its relation to and responsibility for the conduct of public affairs. The public is no longer content to be advised what to do or told what to do by parties or by party managers; it is taking an active interest itself in the doing of them.

At Chicago one of the striking things was the evidence among all classes of the existence of a new sense of political association with affairs of moment. At every stage of the convention proceedings the influence of direct popular contact with the delegates was evident. The popular will was never more openly expressed; even where it apparently failed of its purpose, it left an impression of latent and reserved power, or, maybe, of hindered purpose, certain to manifest itself later on in some new and effective form. The same conditions precisely seem to prevail at Baltimore. There, too, the public is close to its representatives and making itself felt at every turn in the day's procedure. It is a little new, a trifle green, in some of the parts it is playing, but it is playing them as best it can, and the important thing is that it is meeting the hope of the founders and well-wishers of the nation in the depth of interest it is taking in its own affairs.

Nobody can say with truth that the American public is apathetic in national politics, or that it is likely soon to become so.

ALMA-TADEMA did in painting what Walter Pater did in story. Of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries chronologically viewed, in mind and ideal, the painter was of the pre-Christian civilizations that flourished in and about the eastern Mediterranean.

Synthetic Rubber Intimations from British sources that rubber, properly describable as "synthetic," has been produced, naturally has set tongues going and pens writing wherever rubber is gathered from present sources, or bartered in, or converted into a thousand and one useful articles. It will be recalled that a similar statement was made by German makers of fabrics at Elberfeld, though in this case there was no claim of ability or readiness to undertake commercial production. For that specific claim the consumer tensely waits. That some day industrial chemistry will list rubber with its triumphs in synthetic manufacture, he has no doubt. But when? Suddenly swollen demand, born of a world wide passion for vehicling in rubber-wheeled carts, steam or electrically propelled, has given extraordinary value to such natural sources of rubber supply as now exist, has sent scurrying over the earth explorers dreading naught but failure to locate new plants or trees exuding the precious gum, and has led to the investment of millions of investors' wealth in new plantations. An ever-increasing market awaits a product however made that will meet a world-need. Vast wealth awaits the first combination of chemist and capitalist that will put on the market a laboratory and factory product enduring the tests bound to be imposed.

From the technical and chemical side of the problem the path is clearer than it was, thanks to prolonged experimenting by a variety of ardent investigators, all aware of the fame and fortune that will follow success. The problem now seems to be more one of practical application.

It would seem as if by November almost every kind of "progressive" elector might have his or her special kind of presidential candidate to vote for.

Liberia Aided

AMERICANS, whose memories go back to the days when the United States was wholly a debtor nation and when its influence in international affairs was solely of that limited type set forth as proper by Washington in his farewell address, often sit up with more or less astonishment now as the cables tell of loans from Wall street to Japan or to Germany, or of official action by the state department fostering American financiers' efforts to conserve the credit of China in Asia or Liberia in Africa. Put with these items the fact that trained American advisers have aided Siam, Japan, Persia and China in recent radical political transformations, and it becomes apparent that a new era of American influence has opened.

Latest news from Liberia as to satisfactory adjustment of certain German claims upon the republic by the American adviser now cooperating to restore stability to that republic, will at least temporarily remind citizens of the United States that there are new chapters opening in one of the sentimental experiments in which the ration first induged while trying to meet the issue of negro slavery. Liberia symbolizes for the United States the shattered ideal cherished once by many of the best people of the nation, namely that the American race-conflict might be avoided through return to Africa of all the slaves and their offspring. But they would not go, at least in any such numbers as to materially alter the home situation.

Other and more drastic methods of adjustment of the issue came; the distant African colony and experimental republic soon passed out of mind; and for decades relations between the two republics were formal. Early in this century the Liberian republic found itself in a precarious condition financially, and pressed by European powers with colonies adjacent to the only experiment in democracy there is in that section of Africa. An appeal was made to the United States; Secretary of State Root heard it, answered favorably, and a commission was sent out in 1909 to investigate and report the precise situation. On the basis of this body's report arrangements for thorough reorganization of finances were made, an expert American-Prof. R. Falkner-supervising the process and American, British, French and German bankers contributing funds. Thus the United States is in Africa as well as in Asia, sharing with Europe in the newer ways of making history by alliances that are no less powerful than ancient ones based on dynastic affiliations. Once it was blood that counted. Now it is dollars or their equiva-

It should be remembered, however, that the flavor of the hospitality of the convention cities continues long after the political differences are forgotten.

Torrens Law

Holds

Its Own

IT WILL be pleasing information to all who are desirous of seeing every forward step maintained that the Torrens system of insuring titles, to real property recently passed triumphantly through another judicial test in New York state. Simplicity of the Torrens system, the feature that recommends it to unprejudiced and practical people, has been the principal cause of the opposition raised against it not only in New York but in every state where it has been introduced and legalized. With many the belief obtains that if any agreement, transaction, contract or transfer in real estate is not involved and complicated, it cannot be entirely binding. To these a certain amount of legal verbiage and phraseology, and a certain amount of red tape and circumlocu-

tion, seem to be necessary in order to insure security. Now, the Torrens system is intended to simplify real estate transactions, to expedite transfers, to reduce the charges, while affording all the assurance necessary to the holders of titles. A recent decision of Justice Crane of the New York supreme court in the case of Crabbe vs. Hardy afforded the opponents of the Torrens law an opportunity of using some one-sided interpretations to its detriment. In a more recent decision the justice deemed it necessary to refer to this. He made it clear that he did not mean to imply that titles to real property, as foes of the new system had alleged, could. not be cured or perfected under the Torrens law, pointing at the same time to the section of the New York act which says that "inany action under this article the court may find and decree in whom the title to, or right or interest or any part thereof is vested, whether in the plaintiff or in any other person, and may remove clouds from the title, and may determine whether or not the same is subject to any lien, or incumbrance, estate, right or interest, and may declare and fix the same," etc., "and generally in such an action, the court may make any and all such orders and directions as shall be according

In short, simple as the Torrens law system of real estate transfers is, as compared with the old, it is proved here, by reference to the statutes, as in other states, that it is broad enough to meet every contingency, even that of removing a cloud from a title where a cloud exists, or of making a bad title good. The Torrens system has been attacked from apparently every possible angle, but so far it has proved impregnable.

of this act.'

A GRATIFYING variation in records of the achievements of American Rhodes scholars at Oxford University comes opportunely at this academic season, when issues of culture are being debated. American youth, profiting by the largess of the empire-enlarger, have done well in athletics in competition with rivals from all parts of the British realm. Coming to the severer tests of prize-winning in fields of literature, mathematics, logic and philosophy they have not shown that thoroughness of preparation and fine sense of verbal values enabling them to win. So that the broad generalization respecting American Rhodes scholars, made by critics on the ground, has been that they disclosed no such adequate and thorough training for a university career as do youth coming up from the English "public schools" or from the Scotch preparatory schools. Of the likeableness of the Americans and their excellent personal qualities there has been no question.

Now that a Harvard graduate, representing Massachusetts, has won the Newdigate prize in English verse, with a poem dealing with "King Richard the First Before Jerusalem," the record will be somewhat different. It is an honor previously won by men of the youthful promise and ultimate achievement of Matthew Arnold and John Addington Symonds, and it is to be credited now to a young man with cultural traditions and ideals that make it quite natural that he should have competed for the prize. A specialist in the humanities and most concerned with literature and ethics, he naturally is getting from Balliol and the Oxford environment a maximum of its wealth of inspiration.

Any curiosity there may be to know the quality of the mind and the outlook on life of the prize-winner, Mr. Greene, can be satisfied by reading his prize-winning, recent essay on Harvard's educational and social betterment, printed in the Advocate of May 25. It is interesting to note in this comparison of Harvard with English universities how he deprecates American concentration of athletic interest on the teams; how he praises the superior debating systems of Oxford and Cambridge; and how little he values the lecturing habit of the American university.

WHILE United States maritime interests seem not yet to be making ready with additional ships to South America, the report comes from France that a new line is to be started between Bordeaux and Brazil.

A PLAINT goes up that state nicknames are not used as much as they used to be by dwellers in the United States. Bostonians, it is said, do not refer to the "Old Bay state" as often as of yore, nor are Indianians, when they consort together, as likely to 'point with pride' to the fact that they come from Hoosierdom. A Yale graduate, from Hartford, seldom admits that he lives in "the Nutmeg state;" and Wisconsin progres-

State Nicknames Going Out sives are not wont to talk of "the Badger state" as their home. There is nothing surprising about this. A nickname, like any other cognomen, must fit if it is to be freely and commonly used, and most of the names given to the American commonwealths by the first settlers, whether colonial or later, do not have pertinence now. Maine still has pines, to be sure, but nationally considered her coast resorts and not her inland forests are her present chief asset. Each year sees a waning number of residents of Massachusetts to whom the historical significance of the name "Bay state" means aught. The exodus they are most interested in does not date from Puritan and Pilgrim England but from Ireland, Italy, Russia or Turkey. What has Virginia done for generations to keep alive and significant her title, "Mother of Presidents," in what way is Pennsylvania "the Keystone state"?

Nor is this lack of correspondence between title and fact the only cause for waning use of the state nicknames. Interest and pride in states as such is less than it used to be. The element of special affection that often enters into use of a nickname of a person has never been shown in American life quite as generally as it was in the case of Mr. Roosevelt when he was President; and his successor also has had not a few admirers who have ventured to call him "Bill." But these men have stood for nationalism, and it is chiefly of that aspect of government that most Americans are now thinking. They are not antiquarians, so are not impressed by the meaningful and dramatic history of the colonies; they see no special reasons, other than sentimental, why six states of a small section like New England should continue to have diverse laws on common interests. They think in terms of Washington, London, Paris and Berlin, not of Boston, Providence, Augusta, Concord and Hartford. Consequently old names tend to go overboard with old loyalties.

THERE exists in England a guild of the Daughters of Ceres, its purpose being to interest women in agriculture. Something of the kind is much needed in the United States, where city men are constantly saying that they would long ago have taken to farming were it not for the opposition of their wives.

PERENNIALLY, almost, some indefatigable student of statistics, approaching the matter from a new angle, ventures to show why and to what extent New England has surpassed the rest of the country as the mother of men of eminence, the latest test of which is admission to "Who's Who?" Thus in a recent issue of a periodical published at Amherst College, an alumnus renowned as a statistician shows that out of every 100,000 natives of Massachusetts, resident anywhere in the United States last year, nihety-six achieved recognition in this annual biographical dictionary, whereas the ratio of New York was only forty-eight to each 100,000 natives distributed nationally. Incidentally the statistician also claims that study of the same compilation shows that the college graduate has a hundred chances to one of winning recognition and rating compared with the American who lacks academic discipline.

. The momentum which New England has acquired from priority of her attachment to the cause of popular education and the extent to which she always has been ready to further it is not one that will be checked readily by any conscious or unconscious action of her citizens. But she has something more to do than to sit down to study with satisfaction the record of the past and the present, if she contemplates holding, a quarter of a century or half a century hence, the same relative rank that she holds now. Regions of the country with a democratic system of education from kindergarten to university, entrenched and backed by state funds, where every youth of either sex has a chance at free education, are in the course of time to have a higher percentage of educated men than regions where higher education is set apart chiefly for those able to pay for it. New England long has had a primacy in public libraries. That also may be challenged. She also has been dominated hitherto by seets emphasizing the worth of liberty in education, in belief, and in worship, all of which has contributed much to the rise of her children to places of influence.

If A nation's wealth is in its children then the United States is rich indeed. There were 27,000,000 of school age in 1910.

A PRESIDENTIAL veto of the army bill, and failure of Congress to act on the naval, legislative and executive appropriation bills conjointly, bring administrators face to face with a new fiscal year without provision made for public servants' pay. So far as Congress is responsible the excuse is partially that of conflict between House and Senate and partially absence of lawmakers from the capital attending the presidential conventions. Poli-

No Cash for Officials tics has been put above legislative duty. Some of the practical results of the negligence and indifference are bound to be serious whatever may be the shifts made by department officers to avoid the worst consequences. The law very properly leaves no considerable discretionary power to executives in such crises. Without funds they must order work to cease no matter what the consequences; and orders of this kind, to take effect July 1 unless countermanded, have gone forth to Hawaii, the Philippines and wherever the nation is represented navally.

The situation is so needless. Were the rules respecting vetoes of appropriation bills as they should be, a President might squelch objectionable items and riders without holding up entire bills. Progressive administration theories vest such power in Governors and mayors. Why not in presidents? But untoward effects might be offset by a formal provision that appropriations always shall continue on the basis of the current year's scale until formal action is taken ordering otherwise.

It is not necessary to wait until next November to have some of the dreams in the political platforms transformed into realities.
